

Dr James Kirkbride, Reader in Epidemiology, Division of Psychiatry, University College London.

James is a Psychiatric epidemiologist and Director of the PsyLife research group, UCL, investigating the causal role of social determinants of mental health. Focused on understanding the life course aetiology of psychotic disorders and inequalities in risk and outcomes by ethnicity, migration and urban living. Founder of PsyMaptic, predicting need for Early Intervention Psychosis care based on translational epidemiology.

